Still hidden in a briefcase and sneaking in a round of Super Mario in that game boy? Rest, man. You will be pleased to know that you are not alone. According to Nintendo, 23% of game boy users are between the ages of 20 and 34, and 21% are over the age of 35. And fortunately for you, InterAct Accessories Inc. has come up with a plugin that gives you some cover: Shark MX, which converts game boy colors or game boy pockets into fully functioning PDAs. You can now send and receive emails between Tetris rounds (in accents that offer a set amount of free access), schedule appointments with calendars, and use calculators, address book, and world time zone features. Or you can install it on your kid's game boy and multitask with family events. Learn more about shark MX, which retails for $39.99 on the web (www.interact-acc.com). Yra Bornstein thought she didn't need to search for other puzzles to entertain and engage her mind. For many years, Bornstein, chief operating officer of Florida-based American Bancard LLC, a company that provides credit and debit card processing services to merchants, has been a master of the popular game Sudoku. But in 2008, Bornstein was flipping the pages of parade magazines, and every week he met Numbrix [source: Bornstein], a puzzle of numbers and logic. Since then, Bornstein has been hooked on Mbyrix and my wife says I'm always nuts. For Bornstein, there are many reasons why Numbrix is fun, challenging and so satisfying. For one thing, Bornstein equates the puzzle to being in a maze. As long as there is always a way to get on and out of the way, the path I choose can keep moving. Interestingly, Bornstein is fascinated by Numbrix because each puzzle is unique and each offers the kind of accomplishment that can be elusive in the daily activities of his work. In a business environment, there are ongoing issues that need to be addressed, and many people don't solve them 100%. In Numbrix, the challenge is on the fore and center and is completed in less than 10 minutes, whether it's success or puzzle wins. Click ahead to learn how and where to play Numbrix. Page 2 crossword puzzles are a traditional part of many daily newspapers. Since 1913, when Arthur Wynn published the first crossword puzzle in the New York world, puzzlers around the world have been delighted with this head-scratching game [Source: A Brief History of Crossword Puzzles]. And there is more to crossword puzzles than fun; Some studies have shown that regularly solving puzzles such as crosswords and Sudoku can help improve memory, and also reduce mental decline in older people [Source: Christie]. Crossword puzzles are also a great way to improve your vocabulary and general knowledge. Some crossword puzzles are simple, but some are not the most certain. The New York Times' famous Sunday crossword puzzle is one it's the hardest out there, and it won't be for the faint of heart. But don't despair - there are a lot of tricks that can help turn you into a puzzle master. Remember that if the puzzle becomes difficult, you will be more satisfied when filling the last square. Ready to dive? Read the top 10 tips for solving crossword puzzles. Page 3 Golf Club and proper alignment of hands is important. When you're nailed, you can work on other aspects of the game, confident that you'll be able to produce more consistent swing. Without it, the exact shot would be almost far between. If your left hand catches the club correctly, you need to completely cover the end of the club. The wrist should be above the grip of the club. You can have the most natural grip in the world, but if it's not aligned with the club face, you won't get a good shot. Before handling the ball, look down at the length of the club to make sure the grip and club face are in proper alignment. This way, when you hold the club, your face is square with the ball. [Source: LearnAboutGolf.com] If you're holding the club with your palm, your elbow will tell you. The correct golf grip is created in a straight line along the arm. When the elbow is bent, the palm does too much work and the arm does not expand properly in the swing, which reduces the speed [Source: Easy2Technologies.com]. When I started my first company a few years ago, I met with a local bank to explore business lending. I had no idea what I was doing and could easily have been fired by a mid-level banker I visited. But instead of a cold rejection, Jennifer was warm and gracious. She praised the bank's advantages, as she did, and took the time to build a solid relationship, even though there was no way she could get a loan at that time. I left the meeting, loving the bank, but I loved it. She did not act like someone at her own level; it's more like a CEO. Her professionalism and passion stuck with me, and I would often look back to see if she had performed much higher than her business card title dictates. A few years later, I wasn't a little surprised when I read a newspaper story covering her promotion to chief executive. She was always playing above her own level, and it was her destiny. Too often, we wait for that promotion, recognition, or authority to start playing a role. But the quickest way to get there is to start playing away in front of the accolades. In boxing, it is called 'punching above your weight class'. If you want your boss's job, you start fulfilling your responsibilities far ahead of promotion. Inject attention and intensity into your work today that you will promise to give when you reach the next level. If you want to be a leader, start acting like a person. If you want to be a bestselling author, Such a person would do so. If you want to be the highest priced tax litigation expert, don't wait for the fees to be done at the highest level. If the goal is to lead the community, don't wait for political commitments to make a difference. We often have an external title or recognition waiting to do our best, but ironically the fastest way is to play. If you continue to perform one level higher than your salary grade, you can race quickly through milestones of achievement. A decade after meeting Jennifer for the first time, she took over as chair of a local bank, then took on a much larger CEO role at a top-tier national bank. Because she played long before she was recognized, she leapt on her competitors on the path to success. You can do the same. Connect with the ultimate vision of what you want and start playing a role today. Boosting your strength and performance, the rewards you seek will quickly become yours. The main components that determine whether a Stefano Bertolotti/CC-BY-2.0 play is entertaining or successful are stories, scriptwriting, actor performances, stage management, set design and props, costumes, lighting design and sound. The story is the basis of the script and all the other elements of the play. Interesting, passionate or striking stories provide resources for audiences to care about or impress. Persuasive stories generally have powerful literary elements such as settings, themes, plots, and characters. Dialogue and scriptwriting styles also contribute to the success of the play. The performance of an actor in a play is another influential factor. Education, experience, stage presence, energy levels and voice projection contribute to the level of performance of theatrical actors. Production aspects, including stage management, set design, props, costumes, lighting design and sound, all affect the quality of theatrical plays. Production managers and stage managers should strive to have a smooth technical aspect and work at the right time. Scenic backgrounds, furniture, artwork and props add visual aesthetic and atmosphere. Costumes support the development of characters and settings in plays. In addition, sound equipment and lighting effects can improve the production and atmosphere of the play. This site is not available in your country.
